iii. SEAWEEDS

COMMODITY PROFILE

Seaweeds are the most successful fishery product of the Philippines in the recent years. It is essentially a small grower industry at the production side, thus providing livelihood in the generally poor coastal areas. There are five (5) species of seaweeds in the country; the most important variety is the Euchema of the red algae which accounts for 98% of the total Philippine production of seaweed (2004). It is also the source of carrageenan which is the world's foremost food and industrial additives today.

In the 2004, production of 1,204,807.6 M.T. of which Mindanao contributed 56.9%. Among the top producing regions in Mindanao, Zamboanga Peninsula ranked the 2nd largest producer (next to ARMM) of Euchema amounting to 154,786.5 M.T. which is around 13% of the national production. This is attributed to the long stretches of shoreline suitable for seaweed culture.

Investment opportunities includes; expansion of seaweed priority areas, establishment of nurseries/gene bank and establishment of processing plants.

B. PLANTATION CROPS

xv. Coconut

COMMODITY PROFILE

The coconut industry is a dominant sector of the Philippine agriculture, accounting to 3.25 M. hectares devoted for the said sector. Eleven percent (11%) of the total area planted is located in Region IX (Zamboanga Peninsula) covering about 380,946 hectares, about 80% of local coconut production go to the export market with the remaining 20% to the domestic market. Coconut oil (crude and refined), copra, copra meat and desiccated coconut are the country's traditional coconut product exports. Coconut oil accounts for 85-95% of the total coconut exports by volume and 80% by value.

Investment opportunities

- Production of coco peat, geotextiles, and other products from coconut husk
- Production of activated carbon
- The medical benefits derived from coconut oil can be further enhanced to promote as a health food or nutraceutical
- Virgin coconut oil
